

Good will and profits

Merchants who sell our clothes are now sacrificing profits for good will; if they can't get both they prefer good will; it's more valuable. They ought to get yours.

MARINES IN HAITI SICK OF THEIR JOB

Complain of Hardships and Widespread "Indiscriminate Killings" Charge.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, November 24 (by the Associated Press).—There is no doubt of the fact that many of the 1,300 marines on occupation duty in Haiti are sick of the job. They want to go home or somewhere else. It is a hard life for youngsters who are sent into mountain regions in the north, along peaks as high as Denver.

Often they are away from post for weeks, and they declare they undergo many hardships, not the least of which is lack of ice in a climate where it is absolutely essential.

Hear From Home Folks.
Since the first session of the naval board of inquiry at Washington, the marines have been hearing from home folk, anxious to know if they are taking part in "indiscriminate killings." This charge, made by Maj. Gen. George Barnett, former commandant of the marine corps, and then corrected by him, has gone everywhere, marines assert, declaring that the first statement has never been overtaken by the correction. This week's steamer brought hundreds of letters all seeking the truth about conditions. The marines contend that they are on rough duty and then are held up at home as rough men with the gun.

Gen. Neville inspected kitchens built of bits of boards from packing boxes. There was no way to keep out the flies in such a structure. Field kitchens are in use generally.

"Put in a requisition immediately for a new cooking outfit," said the general. "If we are to be here ten or fifteen years we might at least have proper accommodations."

The brigade commander and his staff have made every effort to keep intoxicating liquors away from the marines, but with almost every shop selling drinks the task is difficult. Haiti's principal native drink is rum. It is a wild thing. Marines who have tested it say it is powerful enough to drive a motor cycle.

CUDAHY SEEK EXTENSION OF STOCKYARD FRANCHISE

Want 10 Years Added to Wichita,
Kan., Contract; Propose New Issue to Pay.

The Cudahy Packing Company and Edward A. Cudahy yesterday filed their plan for disposing of their holdings in stockyard corporations under a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. The company's holdings include, it is stated, 5,635 shares of the Wichita Union Stockyards and a minority interest in the Salt Lake Union Stockyards. Under the proposed plan Edward A. Cudahy undertakes to secure for the Wichita Union Stockyards an extension for ten years of its present contract with the Cudahy company, in consideration of which it is suggested that the 5,635 shares of the Cudahys be transferred into a new preferred non-voting 8 per cent cumulative issue of the same number of shares.

A minimum of 2,500 of these new shares and a maximum of 3,317 shares are to be offered to the present remaining shareholders of the Wichita Union Stockyards, prorated according to their present holdings, to be paid for by January 1, 1921. The necessary legal proceedings in Kansas to effect the proposed changes may be completed by the beginning of the new year, it is stated.

The small minority holdings in the Salt Lake Union Stockyards, the company says, it expected to dispose of among persons in the locality of the yards and still hopes to complete the sale.

Because of the filing of the Cudahy and Morris plans only yesterday, and because it has not yet reached a decision about objecting to the Swift and Armour plans, the Department of Justice obtained an order from Chief Justice McCoy extending until November 30 the time for filing of objections. Hearings on the plans was deferred by the court order until December 14.

Thanksgiving, What Is It?

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1920.)

Thanksgiving is a state of mind. It is not a conclusion of logic. You cannot get all the evidence together, present it, argue eloquently about it, and convince a single soul that he ought to be thankful. Because you are trying to push him to a goal along the road of reasoning, when the only way he can reach it is by the road of feeling and imagination.

Hence it is strange to see every year, about Thanksgiving time, the efforts made by many to give a list of reasons why we should be thankful, as though thankfulness were to be come, at by arithmetic.

When you analyze thankfulness put it into the test tube and search for its ingredients and test it by the spectrometer and X-ray. You discover that it is no more nor less than the outward sign of an inward grace which is humility. That is to say, if one thinks he gets more than he deserves he is thankful; if he believes he is getting less than he ought to have he is not thankful.

But we are social animals, and few of us make our estimates by looking at ourselves alone. And it is not so much what we ourselves get that troubles or comforts us; it is a comparison of our own condition with that of our neighbor.

And here comes into play the greatest misery producer, wretchedness spreader, and unhappiness breeder that is known to man.

That is, envy. Most of us would be fairly contented if it were not for other people. Our feeling of injustice is not caused by the fact that we have only bread and butter, for bread and butter are good and we really like them, but by the fact that the other fellow has pie, which is bad for us.

There is, therefore, but one sure recipe for thankfulness and that is to get the habit of considering our own state without reference to that of others.

You are perfectly comfortable in your cottage; why should you lose flesh because your neighbor has a mansion? You have a good bed and sleep well, why should you thorn your pillow by thoughts of his bed which cost a thousand dollars?

You have enough to eat and drink, why worry because he has more than he can eat and drink?

Envy is almost always directed toward the superfluous. It is envy that makes workmen bitter, and women petty, and youth sulky, and politicians vicious, and drives many a business man to bankruptcy.

It is the eternal struggle for precedence, the desire to outshine, outdo, and outrun our neighbor that is the fly in our ointment of contentment.

Not for nothing was the commandment "Thou shalt not covet" put among the ten.

Abate your hot egotisms, and put away your unclean envies, and you will find this earth and your place in it not so bad.

Confucius said: "He dislikes none, he covets nothing—what can he do but what is good?"

There it all is, in a nutshell. Despise no human being, envy none. Such a man is continually in a state of thanksgiving.

GREAT FEASTS OF HISTORY

Thanksgiving, 1623

WASTNESS vivified by towering trees and stillness. Crude cabins at the seaward side of a clearing. One hundred and fifty brave people gathered round a log-hewn festive board. Elder Brewster's thanks for the harvest bounty echo at the lips of Governor Bradford and in the heart of Miles Standish. For the first time there is plenty at Plymouth and hearts are light. Gooseberries "fat and bigge," peas and pumpions, beans, bass, corn, cod, cow-cumbers, ground-nuts, wild turkey and venison vannah. John Alden jests with pretty Priscilla. Massachusetts, Samcoet and the friendly Indians grant guttural approval of White Man's cooking. Thus, the nucleus of our nation marked with feasting and fervor its preservation and God's favor.
